Increased Exports Means More Jobs

The rules of professional sports like football, basketball and tennis keep changing. So do the rules of international trade.

"Free trade" isn't what it used to be. More and more countries have been limiting imports and encouraging exports. At the same time, the number of government-owned businesses abroad has multiplied—even in Western industrial nations, and governments don't play by the same rules as private enterprise. For example, a government-owned company might sell at a loss in order to be paid in a strong foreign currency.

TO BE EQUAL

By Vernon E. Jordan, Jr.

The Private Sector's Role

The Reagan Administration is committed, on philosophical, political and economic grunds, to private sectr solutions for our nation's problems.

By overselling the capacity of the private sector to meet those challenges' the Administration strains its credibility, raises public expectations, and weakens the nation's ability to act constructively.

For there are limits to what the private sector can do.

Woluntarism can never be a substitute for welfare, food stamps, and many other vital forms of income supports.

'Nor should it supplant govern ment's proper role in meeting national needs. Just as no one in his right mind would want to see national defense turned over to a private, profit-making venture, so too it is wrong to turn public functions such as education, police and many social services to the private sector.

But if the central thrust of dealing with social problems must come from government, there is still a vitally important role for the private sector.

Instead of looking to the private sector to replace government, the Administration should implement a public-private partnership that will make a difference in peoples' lives.

For its part, the business community will have to understand what many of its leaders have been saying -- that without a stable social framework, business cannot survive.

That means a top priority for the private sector should be job creation -- a determined effort to hire and train disadvantaged people. That effort cannot wait until the long-promised prosperity comes about. The Administration's policies are leading to another recession and higher unemployment.

Business should be urged, perhaps with targeted financial incentives from government, to hire and train the disadvantaged, recession or no recession. Business got lavish tax breaks for capital investments and for transferring otherwise unusable tax credits and depreciation allowances. Indeed, the tax legislation might have better been labelled the 'Corporate Welfare Act of 1981.'

That suggests a corporate responsibility to invest some of its tax savings in training and hiring the disadvantaged jobless. And it also suggests that the tax system might be beter used to encourage investments in our long-neglected human capital.

The private sector can also plug some of the gaps opened by the Administration's ruthless cuts in social programs. By aiding community groups and non-profit social welfare agencies, it can alleviate some of the pain caused by the cuts.

The most enlightened sectors of corporate America will respond creatively to these new challenges. Indeed, there are signs of real concern on the part of business leadership.

The prestigious Business Roundtable has recently called for increased corporate contributions to charities. The life insurance industry has formally announced a campaign to help create jobs. Many companies plan to increase their activities in the social arena.

One concrete idea that should be acted on was made by David Mahoney, Chairman of Norton Simon, Inc. He recently called on large national and regional companies to prusue a 'one percent play' of adding one percent to their dudgeted manpower costs to hire and train the disadvantaged for entry level jobs.

So it is likely that increased business activism is in the cards. But it is also likely that, given the sorry record compiled by large parts of th corporate community in the past, the private sector will fail to meet the public's needs and expectations.

But even if the private sector's deeds surprise the skeptics, it can do no more than alleviate some of the pain causedby the budget cuts.

Without a strong federal commitment to restore government's responsibility to meet national social problems, those problems will continue to fester.

Meanwhile, Americans will be looking to business to do what it can to meet its social obligations.

The Administration Really Supports Employment Discrimination

William Reynolds, Assistant Attorney General, Civil Rights Division, clearly set forth the Administration's views of affirmative action before the Subcommittee on Employment Opportunities, chaired by Congressman Augustus Hawkins.

Usually, witnesses avail committee members of their testimony at least 24 hours before their appearance. This was not done. Mr. Reynolds gave his copies of his statement to the committee upon his arrival at the hearing.

Mr. Reynolds expressed the fact that equal employment opportunity is of paramount importance and stated that the role of the Civil Rights Division of the Justice Department is to enforce in the courts all Federal civil rights laws which come within the Attorney General's responsibility. However, Reynolds showed that this Administration is straying from the policies of previous Republican and Democratic Presidents, in the implementation of Title VII. He clearly stated that this Justice Department will no longer support the use of quotas or other numerical or statistical formulae, in bringing about equality in employment. He emphasized strongly that quotas, timetables and goals in correcting the age-old employment discriminatory practices are unsound. He said race and sex-conscious preferences are divisive techniques. The entire thrust of Mr. Reynold's testimony was that an individual who can prove that he or she has been discriminated against in employment, has a right to take the case to court, but that elevating rights of groups over the rights of individuals, racial preference, are at war with the American ideal of equal opportunity for each person. Reynolds stated that the Reagan Administration takes the view that the Constitution and laws protect the rights of every person to pursue his or her goal in an environment of racial and sexual neutrality.

Reynolds said the Administration will seek to correct discrimination by "(1) specific affirmative relief for identifiable victims of discrimination, (2) increased recruitment efforts aimed at the group previously disadvantaged, (3) color blind as well as sex-neutral non-discriminatory future hiring and promotion practices." He said that it is the Administration's view that such a method will overcome past discrimination without prejudicing the legitimate interest of others in the work force.

Hawkins told the Assistant Attorney General that he was asking them to accept something idiotic by expecting them to accept a remedy that is not based on race, sex or nationality. Reynolds was reminded that his testimony will have a very chilling effect on women and minorities who will look to the Justice Department for relief.

The Administration's policy as explained by Mr. Reynolds is absolutely no plan for correcting racial discrimination in employment whatsoever, but rather it is a support for discriminatory practices which are certain to perpetuate racism in employment.

In response to a question about the use of goals, quotas and timetables, the Assistant Attorney General said they will use goals in the recruitment process and that goals will be used in monitoring employer's activity. This would be done on an individual by individual basis. These individual cases will have to be brought to the attention of the Justice Department. This will prove costly and time consuming to the aggrieved person. Congressman Hawkins said this Administration's policy shows that government is not on the side of the discriminated-against individual.

The hard-hitting Representative Washington said to Mr. Reynolds, "your testimony is extremely disturbing. It lacks any conception of what the problem is about. Racism is a fact of American life. Blacks didn't create the problem. It was thrust upon them and Congress and the courts have tried to fashion some tool to correct the problem. You've departed from the law because you want to, not because you have to." The Assistant Attorney General said discrimination against blacks is wrong but we cannot justify correcting a problem based on race by creating discrimination against another group. He disagrees with the Court's decision in the Weber case which said a company can take voluntary measures to correct discriminatory practices against minorities. Mr. Hawkins reminded Mr. Reynolds that all through his testimony he was speaking of individual cases, but that systematic discrimination based on groups has been upheld by the Courts.

Congressman Clay asked why should the discriminatory remedy be individual rather than group, and since racism and sexism have been institutionalized, he wanted to know how the Administration intends to deal with it. The answer was, that by addressing the wrong of the individual will cause the employer to improve.

Clay reminded Reynolds that the evil of the discriminatory process is based on race. Concerning the Assistant Attorney General's emphasis upon the individual, Clay informed him that the 13th, 14th, 15th and 19th amendments were based on groups rather than individuals. The response was that it is not the role of the courts to enforce class relief. Clay told Reynolds that he was reinterpreting the law. Reynolds replied that extending rights to one group does not intrude on the rights of another group. His entire argument set forth the idea that to prevent discriminatory employment practices against minorities as a class will discriminate against innocent whites who had no part in inflicting the discriminatory process. His enterpretation is that the present affirmative action measures cause reverse discrimination.

Virginia Taylor's Outside Looking In

To The Editor:

Reference to your recent articles on the THA Mr. Warnick and Mr. Dixon of the Tacoma Urban League. Mr. Dixon and TUL have been, since 1968, the primary community action agency concerned about minorities and disadvantaged whites Mr. Dixon and TUL have been the developers of OJT and other training programs, the developers of cross-age tutoring programs for our kids, and thedevelopers of a highly productive Tacoma Vegetable Gardens program. All citizens of this County have benefitted. And, while we may not agree at all times, as many of you probaly disagree with supply-side economics, we will staunchly support Mr. Dixon as he and the League struggle to imporve the quality of our lives. We will exercise OUR right to speak for ourselves when and if that becomes necessary - Mr. Warnick need not worry.

To The Editor:

This letter is written in response to Jack Warnick's comments as carried in the TNT on Friday, November 20, 1981, as to whether Thomas Dixon, President of the Tacoma Urban League, Inc., speaks for the Black Community when he critized the recent firing of three Black men by the Housing Authority Board of Commissioners.

We, the members of the Black Women's Caucus Area III, would like all Tacoma to know that we agree completely with Mr. Thomas Dixon and support him as a spokesperson for the Black Community of Tacoma/Pierce County. He is honest, forthright, and sincere. We appreciate his willingness to speak out.

As for Mr. Warnick, we advise him to speak for the White people, as the Black Community has its own spokespersons. We further suggest that Mr. Warnick should move to correct the wrong he has helped to do to three Black men and their families.

Royce V. Brown
President, Black Women's Caucus Area III

To the Editor:

This letter is written in response to Jack Warnick's comment as to whether or not Thomas Dixon, President, Tacoma Urban League, speaks for the Black Community.

We, the Soro's of Eta Mu Zeta Chapter, Zeta Phi Beta Sorority agree completely with Mr. Thomas Dixon and encourage him as a Civil Rights spokesperson for Tacoma's Black Community. He has proven to be a trustworthy, decent and loyal leader of our Community.

We the Soro's of Zeta Phi Beta welcome the leadership that Mr. Dixon has provided us with.

Lillian Jasper, Basileus
Eta Mu Zeta, Zeta Phi Beta Sorority

To The Editor:

In the recent TNT (11-20-81) article, where THA board member, Mr. Warnic questioned the Black Community's position regarding the THA dismissed black staffers. I'd say our position in this matter is quite obvious just by looking at the signatures on the recall request. Seems more like Mr. Warnick & Ms. Piva are trying the old divide and conquer routine - what a shame, we're not so blind. The Black Community will remain steadfast and together.

ENERGY UPDATE

A LETTER TO NUCLEAR PROTESTERS:

Barbara Keating

By Mrs. Barbara Keating

Mrs. Barbara Keating is one of the founders and is President of Consumer Alert, Inc., a nonprofit national consumer membership organization.

I respect your 'right' to protest peaceably, but I won't let you turn out my lights.

I am offended by your planning my future. I protest your actions which assure me of a chronic energy crisis.

You told me what you want. Now I'll tell you what I want. I want a future for my children that isn't sapped and barren and second-place, and unemployed and defenseless.

The need for electricity will continue to grow no matter how much you wish it wouldn't.

Electricity can be created by spinning turbines powered by oil. It can be created by natural gas tapped from below the earth's surface for as long as it lasts. It can be created by water falling where circumstances permit and when environmentalists permit. It can be created by burning coal, dug from dangerous mines. All of these methods cause death and damage to the environment. Or, we can use technology and bombard uranium atoms to create heat—environmentally the cleanest method.

Is nuclear power here to stay? I don't know. Progress and technology do not stand still. There'll be fusion and solar and other methods up ahead. But today, the choices are limited. The crisis is real.

Since when are we afraid of progress? What kind of legacy are we leaving our youngsters? We are a proud, industrious and innovative society. We marvel at the development of technology.

We didn't shut down the airline industry when the first plane crashed. We took it apart to see what went wrong, so it wouldn't happen again.

I speak as one American who isn't willing to throw in the towel.

Honest, knowledgeable and caring people — your neighbors — work in the nuclear energy field. I trust them. They do not hold second-rate citizenship. Their beliefs are entitled to equal weight.

The future of our nation is at stake. It's high time you realized our predicament and grew up to face the responsibilities we all must face—united.

That 'new mobilization' you're beginning to sense is peopled by your neighbors and countrymen who are, concerned about your constitutional rights, but who are even more concerned about the survival of the free world.

Sincerely,
Barbara Keating

FOOD SPOILAGE

Power outages in recent days, have left many homemakers wondering about foods in the freezer. Olga Fuste', Washington State University Pierce [illegible] Home Economist has the following [illegible] determining food safety.

[illegible] freezer was fully loaded, it stayed cold [illegible] foods frozen for two days if the [illegible] not opened. In a freezer with less than [illegible], food probably was not frozen more than 24 [illegible].

The basis for safety in refreezing fruits and vegetables is the temperature at which thawed foods have been held and the length of time they were held after thawing.

You may safely refreeze frozen foods that have thawed if they still contain ice crystals or if they are still cold - about 40 degrees F. - and have been held no longer than one or two days at refrigerator temperatures after thawing. In general if a food is safe to eat, it is safe to refreeze.

Guidelines for many common frozen foods:

Fruit can be refrozen successfully. They will usually ferment when they start to spoil which does not make the fruits dangerous but may spoil the flavor.

Caution should be used in meats and poultry as they become unsafe to eat when they start to spoil. Do not refreeze shellfish, cooked foods such as mixtures that contain sauces and gravies, or cooked poultry unless the ice crystals are in abundance. Bacteria multiply rapidly in those foods. Do not refreeze melted ice cream. commercially prepared frozen foods such as T.V. dinnders, meat pies, fish and chips, and frozen juice concentrates

Scriptures

Psalms 121

"I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills, from whence cometh my help. My help cometh from the Lord, which made heaven and earth. He will not suffer thy foot to be moved; he that keepeth thee will not slumber. The Lord is thy keeper; the Lord is thy shade upon thy right hand. The sun shall not smite thee by day, nor the moon by night. The Lord shall preserve thee from evil; he shall preserve thy soul. The Lord shall preserve thy going out and thy coming in from this time forth, and even for evermore.

Malcolms Sports Report

Fletcher Jenkins "The All American" and the Roses will be the Huskies Vs. the Iowa Hawkeyes in the Rose Bowl. One of the reasons the Huskies are going is a big fella named Fletcher "Fats" Jenkins. Believe it or not this guy is one of the nicest young men you would ever want to meet. A well amnnered, christian type young man. But, when he puts on a football uniform, he becomes one of the best defensive lineman in the country. Yes, I am picking him "All American". He has paid his dues. This Rose Bowl game will give him a chance to show everyone, everywhere, what kind of football player he really is. Most of the time he is double and triple teamed. This makes it two on one for the Huskies, a defensive advantage. I was watching the Huskie, WSU game they ran away from him. With all of this double and triple teaming, he still makes things happen. After the Rose Bowl he will go high in the NFL Draft. The Huskies will win the Rose Bowl also. I was watching the Hawks and Chief game, it looked like some paper trying to penetrate a red wall of fire. The Seahawks defensive line being the paper. Kansas City has a real good offensive line. If you don't believe me ask Seattle. The Sonics finally got what they have needed since the season began, a small forward named Greg Kelsler, former team mate of Larry Bird in college. Watch things start happening. South Kitsap keeps on rolling in the Prep Scene. Which goes to show you Tacoma has a real good Football Program. Ask Don James of the Huskies. I want to wish everybody a very happy and peaceful Thanksgiving. You might not think you have a lot but take a look around, you will be suprised. Have any questions or answers, drop me a line. Malcolm 1019 So. 12th Street, Tacoma, WA 98405

CAR CARE TIPS

WHEN TO REMOVE YOUR WONDER PAINT SEALANT

If the paint sealant on the family car was applied professionally, its trade-in value has a better opportunity to remain higher. . .than if a do-it-yourself product was used.

The reason is simple: Paint protection or sealants must bond evenly to paint that is absolutely free from oxidation, pollution or dirt of any kind. Amateurs most often don't have the knowledge, the equipment or the experience to completely purge the paint of harmful debris.

Residual oxidation or pollution will inhibit the bonding of the sealant to the paint. The result is that some areas of paint are protected. . .others are not. While no immediate harm can be detected, the painted areas that are not protected will fade faster over time. The car will most likely need a repaint sooner than if no paint sealant had been applied at all.

If a 'miracle' sealant could be working against a car's paint, have it removed by an auto appearance specialist.

PRESIDENT REAGAN, DAVID STOCKMAN FAIL HUMPHREY'S MORAL TEST OF GOVERNMENT

When I read about David Stockman's problem with foot-in-mouth desease, I was not suprised by his revelation that "supply-side"economics was just a new name for "trickle-down" policies that favor the rich. As a matter of fact, we said just this month ago.

What does bother me, however, is the fact that in the face of Stockman's candor-- as some have described his rambling--many Americans are still willing to give President Reagan's upside down economic program a test. And this test comes at the expense of America's children, senior citizens, and the sick, needy, and handicapped.

This lack of concern for such a large segment of our population reminds me of former Vice President Hubert Humphrey's yardstick to determine government's integrity.

Humphrey said: "The moral test of government is how it treats those who are in the dawn of life, our children; those who are in the twilight of life, our senior citizens; and even those who are in the shadow of life--the sick, the needy, and handicapped."

I used this quotation as part of my opening remarks at the final session of the 41st annual convention of the Maryland NAACP State Conference of Branches in St. Mary's County, Maryland, on Oct. 31. Incidnetally, that organization at the same time presented me with a plaque designating me "Freshman Congressman of the Year". The award recognized me as "Initiator, Agitator, Legislator, and Communicator".

I told the Maryland NAACP that the Reagan Administration should just try Humphrey's moral test of government. When we look at the effort to remove the floor from Social Security; when we look at the cuts in the food stamp program, the school nutrition program, and the Comprehensive Employment Training Act program, we see a clear lack of concern for those who need government's help the most.

We see what is called a government supported by a "Moral Majority" that is indeed a very immoral Minority.

Even a child would know that a family that earns only $10,000 a year would certainly need more money back from taxes than one that earns $100,000 a year. Yet the President's tax cut is upside down so that a family of four earning $10,000 a year would only benefit to the tune of $40 in the first year of this bill. Whereas the family earning $100,000 would get $4,000 back from taxes. That's just completely upside down.

And Reagan's assertion that the rich, out of the goodness of their hearts, would invest this money in such a way as to bring prosperity to the nation was, according to Stockman, merely a pretense. Of course, you and I have always known this. We have always known that we could not expect concern from such people, the vast majority of whom not only do not possess goodness, but do not even have hearts.

But as I told the Maryland NAACP branches, politicians come and go. Congressmen come and go. Presidents come and go. Whatever laws that people enact, people can reverse. There is nothing that has been done that cannot be changed. No one is in office permanently.

We need to marshal ourselves and our forces as others are doing today. Just as the "Moral Majority" is working in hopes of gaining an absolute majority in the House of Representatives for Reagan.

Make no mistake about it. Four- or five-hundred-thousand souls that came to Washington on the 19th of September have had an impact on even Reagan. Now he is beginning to worry a bit about how many additional cuts he can propose with hopes of getting approval .

In addition to joining coalitions such as labor, we need also to have our own agenda. The fact that the budget cuts have negatively impacted on Blacks much more than whites is only further evidence that the race problem is far from gone.

CANCER Answer line

American Cancer Society

A regular feature, prepared by the American Cancer Society, to keep you informed about cancer.

Question: "Is thyroid cancer treatable?"

ANSWERline: Cancer of the thyroid is a highly treatable disease with excellent five-year survival rates for localized disease – 99 percent for men and 97 percent for women. Fortunately, almost half of all thyroid cancer cases are discovered and treated in the localized stage. The five-year survival rate for more advanced cases is 85%. Treatment usually includes surgery and/or radiation therapy.

Request: "Could you explain how programs of cancer control are funded in this country?"

ANSWERline: Cancer is a major national concern and programs of cancer control receive widespread financial support. The Federal Government is a major source of financing through the National Cancer Institute and its other agencies. Voluntary organizations such as the American Cancer Society are another important source of funding. Foundations, institutions, industry and state and local governments also provide substantial funds. Last year this pooling of resources provided more than $1.4 billion to find ways to prevent, detect, treat and understand the complexities of cancer. The objectives are to save more lives from this disease, to prevent the occurence of cancer whenever possible, and to bring back to normal health those who are stricken with the disease.

Question: "Are any cancer drugs made from plants?"

ANSWERline: Plant screening programs to find anti-cancer properties have been going on for many years. Thousands of plants have been tested and botanists have conducted worldwide searches for specimens of plants, shrubs and trees. The search has been worthwhile. For example, two major cancer drugs, vinblastine and vincristine, are made from extracts of the Madagascar periwinkle, a white and rose-flowered Asian plant.
Maytansine, found in an East African shrub, is another anti-cancer drug which is now under study. While the search for and testing of botanical products is a major research effort, it is also important to learn how to synthesize active plant matter. In some instances tons of a plant may be needed to extract a tiny amount of material for use in treatment.

Comment: "I've been told that radiation therapy causes bad side effects. Is this true?"

ANSWERline: Safe doses of radiation therapy can cause skin reactions, nausea, vomiting, a feeling of tiredness – all of which disappear with rest and good nutrition. When these temporary side effects are balanced against the potential for controlling or curing a form of cancer, the benefit to the patient is obvious because unchecked cancer costs lives.
